SYRACUSE NATIONALS

The Nats, boasting the world's most unique major league ownership, are controlled by 150 basketball fans in Central New York. No single person may own more than ten (10) shares of stock in Central New York Basketball Inc., thereby encouraging widespread ownership and support. One share of stock is owned by over 3,200 people---members of the Carrier Recreation Club, Inc. The fighting, hustling, "never-say-die" spirit of this team so captivated the respect and enthusiasm of Central New Yorkers that at the conclusion of the 1953-54 season the fans purchased the Nationals for $200,000.00 and assured the continuance of the National Basketball Association franchise in Syracuse.

Perhaps the most colorful cage story---both player and coach---is "sandwiched" in between "the Digger" Al Cervi's records.

"The greatest professional competition of all time," is the most descriptive story that could be written on the Nats' veteran mentor.

A great scorer - a defensive giant - and, now, an outstanding strategian of the pro-court game, Al Cervi is and has been one of basketball's outstanding contributors from high school in his native Buffalo, N.Y., to the Buffalo Downtown YMCA, to independent squads in Auburn, Syracuse, and Newark (N.Y.), to Les Harrison's Rochester Ebers, Rochester Seagrams, and Rochester Royals, to the Nats.

A respected Syracuse business-man, as well as a community leader, Al now makes his home in the Eastwood area with his beautiful wife Ruth and three children.

NOW.....
